

France

 one crisis after another. The Communists have a knack of seeing it that no stable government will be formed in these liberated countries until the Communists take over. One chap accused Bobby Kennedy of handing over that part of New Guinea which belonged to the Netherlands to Indonesia on a silver platter, but yet we failed to win over Sukarno of Indonesia.

A GRADUATE student at the University of Paris expressed the opinion that Kennedy erred when he invited MacMillan to the Bahamas to discuss whether the Polaris missiles or the Sky Bolt missiles should be used for the defense of Western Europe. He felt that a French official should have been invited. "Kennedy's action appears to me that American and England have created more or less an Anglo-Saxon alliance," he said.

Another student felt that America tried too hard to have the Common Market countries accept England into the European Common Market. He points out that England had the opportunity to join this economic block at its inception, but refused to do so. England, instead, started the Outer Market which failed. Now she wants to come in and bring her Commonwealth Countries. "This we will not stand for because it will throw what we created out of balance." The United States, he felt, "should not have insisted so vehemently that England be taken in. In so doing, the U. S. was actually interfering in an European economic problem which is entirely out of her jurisdiction."

OTHERS FELT that the placing of missiles in France, with the control of the warheads remaining in the hands of the Americans, merely made a satellite out of France. The French felt that they should have a say when and if the warheads were to be used. This is the reason why France had the missiles removed. "To have kept the missiles in France would have made us a target with no say on when and if the warheads were to be used. We are a proud people and do not intend to be made a satellite. Yet, we do appreciate all the help that America gave to France."

Most of the people I talked to concur with de Gaulle in not signing the Test Ban Treaty. They feel that Russia initiated this move to have time to appease her satellites who were straying from her, and time to get caught up in consumer goods which were promised to the people. One

... Council

IN OTHER ACTION, the council:

- Sent a petition for Commercial zoning on property fronting along Pacific Coast Highway east of Crenshaw Boulevard back to the Planning Commission for further study.

- Approved preliminary plans for an addition to the Adult Recreation Center at 1318 Cravens Ave.

- Accepted a recommendation by the city's Parks and Recreation Commission to convert the old North Torrance Library into a senior citizens building. The building will be named for the late Herma Tillim, who donated some $1,000 to the project.

- Approved the consolidation of purchase orders for city stationery supplies. The consolidation will eliminate the need to write about 750 separate purchase orders each six months.

Sets Rummage Sale Friday

A rummage and white elephant sale will be held by the church women and the missionary group of the Torrance Foursquare Gospel Church Friday at the corner of Woodward and Lomita Blvd., Lomita.

The proceeds will be used to assist in the purchase of school uniforms for refugee children in Hong Kong. The schools, conducted on the rooftops by missionaries of various denominations, provides uniforms, all school supplies, and one hot meal each day for the children.

They have broken one moratorium and they'll break this treaty when they are ready to test again. By initiating this treaty, the Russians are reasonably sure America will honor her pledge and not forge ahead of Russia in atomic development."

THE "HOT LINE" between Washington and Moscow also seems to irk the French. They feel that America has entered an era where the destiny of the world will be decided by the Americans and the Russians. This bilateral set up is not acceptable to the French. The French feel that they should be placed on an even keel with Russia, England, Germany and Italy. They want their share of policy making—they want to be an equal partner.

France and de Gaulle, according to the people I talked to, being dissatisfied with America's leadership, are offering a leadership of their own for any nation in the Western World that wishes to join her.
